Joining a Sorority

The DSC recruitment process is designed to find potential members that will be leaders with in the organization. Strong-minded women who will bring new ideas and a great sense of dedications to the organization is the types of potential members that are accepted. In today's highly competitive world only leaders are the ones who come out on top.

Joining a sorority is a commitment that should not be taken lightly. A sorority is not a club, it is a life long bond of sisterhood. To dedicate yourself to becoming a member of a sorority your heart must be dedicated as well. Interests of Delta Sigma Chi Sorority are encourage to research and explore other organizations so that they can make an informed decision of whether DSC is for them. Members of DSC also encourage interests to attend the organization's informational forums, social events and service events so that they can meet and talk to several different members. The best way to decide if an organization is for you is to talk with the members of that organization.

All organizations offer different qualities, benefits and experiences with membership. Becoming a part of Delta Sigma Chi Sorority means you will be helping build and establish a great organization not just adding onto one. DSC is an organization of dedicated, determined leaders and visionaries. Joining Delta Sigma Chi Sorority means you will have an opportunity develop and express new ideas and leadership skills and make an impact that will be as great as you want it to be.

Today Delta Sigma Chi Sorority, Inc. is still providing the same qualities and services its formation was intended for and is now the largest Greek Letter organization on it's founding campus, New York City Technical College. In addition to its great philanthropic achievements DSC has successfully co-founded the Inter-Greek Council at City Tech, a school that once did not acknowledge or accept Greek letter organizations. The sisters have also founded the DSC's Blue Diamond club, a community service clubs that exist on several CUNY campuses and is expanding just as fast as DSC. The bond and hard work of "The Divine Sisters of Chi" will keep the organization strong and continuously reaching new goals in the years to come.
